1814 to a small earth fort called Fort Hollingsworth about one mile below Elkton. On the 11th, "the English came up with four barges, and attempted to pass up to and burn the town... As soon as they came in range (we) opened a fire upon them from 4 or 5 pieces of artillery and after firing about 20 shots and keeping up a general discharge of musketry, the enemy retreated down the river and abandoned the undertaking. (We) remained at the Fort for about two weeks, so as to be ready in case of an emergency. At the end of that time deeming all danger at an end, we were dismissed and retruned home." Affidavit of Matilda Ann Divine age 58 included in this claim -"I Matilda Ann Divine age 58 res of New York City, was residing in Elkton in July 1814 when the people of that town expected an attack from the Brittish Barges which appeared at that time in the Elk River. I was employed for two or three days in making cartridges in preparation for the defence of the place. On the 11th day of July I saw the British Barges on the River Elk; I saw men on board said barges whom I supposed to be officers having red coats on and who were waving their swords in the air; I also heard firing that seemed to come from the Barges, and other firing that appeared to be from the Americans on the land. I understood that the citizens of the neighborhood were organized under the command of Captain Sample for the defence of the place and that they went down to the shore had a fight with the Brittish and they, the British retired down the River." Also included in this claim is extract from a letter of John Rogers, Secretary of Navy, which was published in John Brannan's Official Letters of the Military and Naval Officers of the United States during the War with Great Britain, page 377- "July 14th 1814, Sir: In consequence of information received from General Foreman, at a late hour on the 11th instant, that four of the enemy's barges had been repulsed by a party of militia at Elkton, but that they were expected to return the succeeding night in greater force, I was induced to order Lieutenant Morgan of the Navy, to march 250 of the officers and seaman attached to the flotilla, to his assistance, for the defence of that place and the adjacent country. The above officers and sailers were embarked in a few minutes, and you will not think inactive when I inform you that in three hours and 47 minutes, the whole detachment, completely armed, reached the courthouse at Elkton, with two heavy pieces of travelling artillery, notwithstanding the roads were excessively bad, and the night very dark and rainy. Hull age 65 res Union Co, Ohio; states he volunteered to leave the fortifications at Elk Landing to carry a supply of ammunition to French Towne but the place was burned before the party could reach the breast work; the party was nearly cut off by the British, escaping capture by their knowledge of the nearest route to the fortifications of Elk Landing. They reached Elk Landing in time to beat off the enemy and save about thirty sail of bay craft that laid up there for protection. The British were computed at two hundred strong, in ten barges, armed with swivels in their bows. John Hull was in a second skirmish with the British boats in the following year at the same place, also under the same Captain. In August 1814 John Hull was again called out by Capt Sample in common with the whole Brigade to repel an expected invasion near Baltimore. He remained at Baltimore until ordered to Cecil Co. by Col Veazey to send out the delinquent members of his regiment to join his command. John Hull was employed by the government for several years, sending thirty-two and forty-two pounders (long guns) from Principio Furnace by direction from Col John Rodgers for the frigate built at Philadelphia under his directions. He succeeded in getting them all to Philadelphia before the Principio works were destroyed by the British. Hull was later employed by Samuel T. Anderson, Naval Storekeeper of Philadelphia or New York to superintend the transportation of heavy cannon from Elk Landing to Christiana for the use of Sacketts Harbour. At that time John Hull was the acting partner of the firm of A. Scott and Co. He was from this time until peace was proclaimed, engaged in forwarding gunpowder from Reni Duponts powder works on the Brandywine to the city of New York.
